- 30% 1 - 2 hours
- 23% 2 - 4 hours
- 13% 4 - 6 hours
- 17% 6 - 10 hours
- 10% More than 10 hours

Do you expect to do more, about the same, or less coaching over the next 12 months?

- 7 More
- 23 Same
- 0 Less

Trends over the last four years

Good news coaches are looking to do more or about the same amount of coaching in the next 12 months.

The average hours coached per week over the last four years is 2-4.
Your views

Positive

“The course I attended was extremely helpful; I’ve used aspects of it every day, I’m so grateful for the bursary!

“I think I’m developing as a coach. I still get nervous before sessions - with larger groups. I’m trying to overcome this and will hopefully become more confident”

“The level 2 qualification has given me the chance to work with new players. This has led to an increase in the size of the club I coach at and an increase in the number of children receiving badminton coaching”

Negative/Constructive

“The 2-4 hours is just contact time but in reality it’s at least double that when you include planning, travel, booking venues etc.”

“It would be helpful if bursaries could be given to clubs to distribute to volunteers to help them with costs and expenses. It’s hard to recruit coaches unless you are really passionate about what you do, there really is no incentive. You are sometimes a ‘sitting duck’ for abuse by parents unfortunately which does not encourage people to come forth. Some incentive to help recruitment and retention would be useful”

“Staff changes have meant we’ve lost some of the sessions that used to run. Hopefully things will pick up over the next year”

About the bursary

“Your bursary helped to get me qualified. In 2015 I won Youth Coach of the Year for the district council, so thanks are extended to you for making that possible”

“The bursary is essential as we struggle to get enough qualified coaches into the sport. The more barriers that can be removed the better”

“The bursary scheme has been brilliant. Without it I would not have been able to take my Level 1 Badminton. Anthony Statham has been very supportive and helpful. I am now working towards my Level 2!”

Coach development

“I feel more confident”

“It’s a great stepping stone to help ease the financial strain of qualification costs”

“I’ve been able to help the juniors develop at our club”

“Cycle coaching has opened up whole new avenues. I have more influence in the local community, am invited to be part of steering groups and have significantly changed the culture of my cycling club”

“I continue to learn and improve. The club has gone from strength to strength and continues to improve”
